Recently in the supermarket, a bag suddenly screamed behind me

Laptops made from bores or music out of buckets and other found objects. Remote controlled hammer drills or earthquakes in low volume. 21 mysterious boxes and a fully automated bar with audio-video-jukebox. Danish heavy metal played on a lute and an opera about the life of David Hasselhoff. A neighbour-friendly 72-hour-concert for headphones or another one over the distance of 300 kilometres. Films to take part in and other strange hobbies.

Have you ever been chased by a speaker? Have you ever heard music with your kneecaps? Do you always forget your passwords, too? What do you hear when you hear nothing and what do fishes listen to? How do you come from Stralsund port to Mexico City? And how does the header through the wall work?

The 8th garage festival, which will take place from the 23rd of July until the 14th of August, is concerned with various aspects of the interface principle. This applies both to interesting technical interfaces for entering the black box and to the practice of communicating, presenting and producing art. The festival presents exhibitions, installations, concerts/performances, lectures, films and workshops over the course of three weeks. We are happy to have won for this year's edition the news portal loogie.net as media partner.
